WAR ENDS

Celebration For Ocean Beach Held With San Diego

Closing Of Stores Begins At 4 P. M. Tuesday

After several false starts, Ocean Beach celebrators of victory in this war began in earnest Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the radio news flash came that the Japs has decided to quit the war.

For the most part, however, celebrators from this community joined in the night long hilarity staged in down town San Diego.

Here in Ocean Beach first reaction to the big news was in prolonged sounding of car horns, ringing of bells, and a few cars tearing up and down Newport Ave. One boy started the young lads celebration dragging tin cans behind his bike as he rode up and down the street.

The stores including the liquor stores began closing promptly at 4 o'clock. One liquor store had to be reminded by the police of the orders for their closing. First drunk was taken off the streets by the officers a few moments later.

No Sirens Available

Ocean Beach lacked noise making devices and an appeal to Fire Chief Parrish by Ocean Beach business men for sounding the siren at the Newport Ave. fire station was without success. Parrish stated that arrangements had been made with the military not to sound the fire sirens for victory anywhere in the city.

Manager Don Thomson cooperated with the police in keeping the celebrators off the streets here by making the Strand theatre Tuesday evening program free to everybody. As a result Newport Ave. was no more crowded than on any week-day night.

Ticker tape being scare most any kind of white paper was used to throw into the streets here.

The center of the city's celebration being around the Plaza on Broadway, practically all the servicemen joined the crowd there. As a result the Ocean Beach USO had less than usual attendance that evening.

Wednesday, Main Holiday

Wednesday proved to be the nearest to a complete closing of Ocean Beach business district in many a year. Even the drug stores were closed. Only a couple of eating places were open and each had long lines of waiting customers. The USO also ran out of food for the servicemen Wednesday evening.

Most stores re-opened Thursday, also the bank, but the postoffice remained closed for the second day and will open again as usual this (Friday) morning.

Novel Slogans Used On Some Of Stores

Closing signs that were both apt and novel were used on a few of the local Newport avenue stores for the Wednesday holiday. The three noted read as follows:

"So sorry, scuze pleeze—Gone to honorable funeral."

"Closed for Hirohito's funeral, and we ain't riding no white horse."

"Closed—Gone to see Halsey ride white horse."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dunn have returned from a two weeks vacation trip to the Laguna mountains. The latter is the proprietor of Elsie's Beauty Shop, 4879 Voltaire St.

Brief Meeting Held By Kiwanis Club On Tuesday

Only a brief meeting of the Kiwanis club was held Tuesday evening, the great news of the war's end having disrupted plans for a program. Kiwanis club of La Jolla was to have come over in force for a joint meeting with the local Kiwanians and was to have put on the program.

Instead of a formal program, only a brief business session was held, at which several announcements were made and a few items of business transacted. Capt. Burritt S. Mills, who has been a leader in the club and a former secretary, announced that he is leaving Ocean Beach Saturday to resume his pre-war business in Europe. He said his headquarters would be in Paris.

Preliminary arrangements were made for a fishing trip for Boy Scouts of Troop 28 for next Sunday, sponsored by the club. Five of the men announced they would make the trip. Any other members finding they can go are asked to contact Martin Murphy by phone (B-7451) before Sunday.

Cognizance of Victory day was taken by the club at the close of the meeting, when Rev. James Roberts led the members in prayer of thankfulness for the final conclusion of the war.

Visitors were J. H. McKinney of the San Diego Kiwanis club, Joe Foss of the El Centro club and R. G. Hunter, of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce staff, a guest of Milt Lancaster.

Now It Can Be Told Of Nagasaki Map

Evidently now it can be told about the part that Fred Edwards of Ocean Beach played in providing maps of Nagasaki for the Naval Intelligence and the F.B.I.

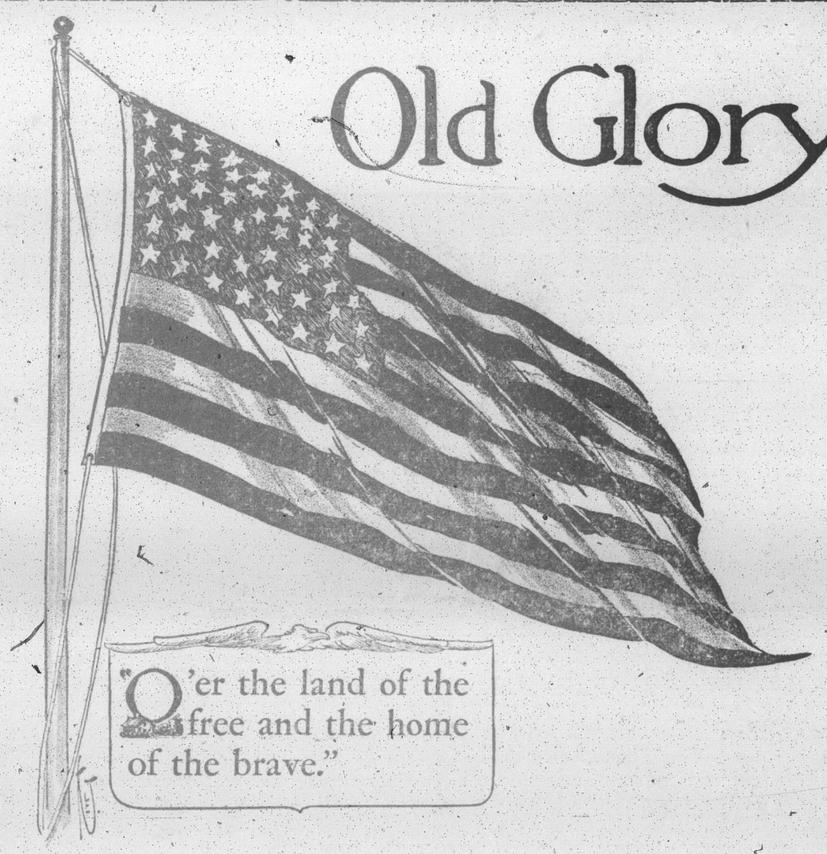
In the early days of the war, Edwards, who spent about six years in Japan as a youth, says the F.B.I. and the Naval Intelligence contacted him at Coronado for information about Japan. Result was he provided valuable information and maps about Japan, particularly about Nagsaki and its famous Mitsubishi war implement making factory, also about Sasebo and other fortified areas of Nippon's homeland. It was Nagasaki and the said Mitsubishi plant that felt the full destructive force of the second atomic bomb launched in the closing days of the war.

Quiet Night Here Report The Police

Tuesday night, the big night of San Diego's celebration for war's end, really proved to be "just another night" for Ocean Beach police, they reported Thursday. Law violations were even less than usual that night, they say, and on Wednesday, the main holiday here in celebration of the victory, there were only three drunks and one drunk car driver arrested by the local officers.

The crowd at the beach was larger than usual Wednesday, with no near-drownings reported.

Gordon Schneider, head of the Schneider drug store, is taking a brief respite from his strenuous store duties at Lake Henshaw this week. L. D. Scott is assisting in the store during Mr. Schneider's absence.



This Is It!

PEACE! Not a partial Peace—not just a hope—not a wish—but the real thing—PEACE!

The guns are silent. The planes are grounded. The bombs drop no more. The fighting men rest—not fretfully in fear of tomorrow's battle; theirs is a blessed rest that comes only with the realization that there are no more struggles ahead, no more long, ghastly days of ceaseless fighting, no more endless nights of turmoil and torture; no more bleeding, no more dying.

Today the overflowing hearts of soldiers and civilians alike rise in one mighty prayer of thanksgiving that the cause of Right has triumped. Our Nation has risen from the depths of danger into which it was suddenly plunged on that quiet Sunday morning in December nearly four years ago. Four years? Yes, four years as we measure time. But four decades, four centuries to those who have fought and those who have been waiting for their return.

Now our men of the land and sea and air no longer look toward Tokyo. Their eyes look toward the place where their hearts and hopes have ever been—home! Home!

This Nation is fortunate in knowledge that the victory has proved to the world that our way of democratic life is the sole enduring foundation for peace and happiness.

"The new thing," President Truman said, "the thing we had not known—the thing we have learned now and should never forget, is this: That a society of self-governing men is more powerful, more enduring, more creative than any other kind of society, however disciplined, however centralized. Now let us use that force and all our resources and all our skills in the great cause of a just and lasting peace."

That is the way of peace on earth through goodwill toward men.

Only Three Bid On Recreation Center Building

All Bids Referred To The City Manager For Action

San Diego city council Tuesday opened bids for the construction of the Ocean Beach Memorial Community Recreation Center building and found only three bids had been entered in spite of the fact that 16 firms had made application for the plans and specifications.

All three bids were found to be higher than the $53,500 available for the project, Chairman James F. Roberts of the Community-Civic committee, who attended the opening, reported Wednesday. Lowest bid of the three was by the firm of L. C. Anderson & Co. for $65,430. The other two were by Stanton-Reed $73,999 and S. E. Young Co. $75,000.

The council referred the bids to City Manager Fred A. Rhodes and the city attorney for further action.

Chairman Roberts stated that "the bids were higher than we had anticipated and may mean that a little later another call for bids will be issued. Our committee will take action immediately and plans to meet with City Manager Rhodes to decide what the next move should be. Labor costs as included in the bids are thought to have been higher than they would be at a somewhat later date."

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Redmon, who have been living at La Jolla recently, have purchased the Amos Shoe Shop at 5031 Newport Ave. and have taken possession. They made the purchase from Mr. Hofferber, who had operated the shop for several months. Mr. and Mrs. Redmon had recently moved to California from Indiana.

Japs Quit At 4 P. M. Aug. 14, Pacific Time

At 4 p. m. Aug. 14, '45, Ocean Beach time, the big news came to this community, by radio, and after false alarms also had been broadcast previously, that World War II had come to an end. At that hour at the White House in Washington President Truman read the momentous message that brought to a close the most terrible war of all history. The message from Emperor Hirohito accepting the Allied Nations surrender terms as laid down by the Potsdam Conference was relayed to Washington through the neutral Swiss government. Announcing its receipt President Truman issued the following history-making statement:

"I have received this afternoon a message from the Japanese government in reply to the message forwarded to that government by the secretary of state on Aug. 11. I deem this reply a full acceptance of the Potsdam declaration which specifies the unconditional surrender of Japan. In this reply there is no qualification. Arrangements are now being made for the formal signing of surrender terms at the earliest possible moment.

"Gen. Douglas MacArthur has been appointed the supreme Allied commander to receive the Japanese surrender. Great Britain, Russia and China will be represented by high ranking officers.

"Meantime, the Allied armed forces have been ordered to suspend offiensive action."

Terms To Be Signed At Manilla

The surrender terms are to be signed by authorized representatives of Hirohito at Manilla. MacArthur Thursday ordered these representatives to leave Japan for Manilla in a white plane between 4 and 7 p. m. Thursday, Pacific time.

With the signing of the terms at Manilla, the war officially ends, all hostilities are ordered to cease, and the proclamation of V-J Day is made by President Truman.

Program On Fire Control Will Be Given August 27

Ocean Beach Woman's club will present a fire control program at the clubhouse corner Muir and Bacon Sts., Monday evening, Aug. 27, at 8 o'clock, announces Mrs. C. W. Early, the club president. The program is free and the public generally is invited to attend.

Ernest R. Smith, fire dispatcher with the U. S. Forest Service, will give an hour's program of moving pictures on fire control and the conservation of natural resources. Following a brief talk by Mr. Smith and likely by Mr. Varney, who is a nephew of C. A. Varney of Ocean Beach, there will be a period for questions from the audience.

Aim of the club is to present this educational program as a feature of the summer vacation agenda and as a public service to the community, Mrs. Early indicated.

Dr. J. L. McSparran, who recently practiced medicine in Ocean Beach, and is now director of the Bayview Clinic in Pacific Beach, has let the contract for a three-bedroom house that he plans to build soon in Pacific Beach.

Mrs. Mary Fold is back at work at the Veda Moss Sportswear shop after a month's vacation, a part of which she spent in Los Angeles.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

CHAPTER XII: Scott goes on s... trafing missions, with his "Old E... minator," as he has now nicknamed it. Kittyhawk, and cuts a Jap battalion to bits.

CHAPTER XIII: The AVG are told they are to be inducted into the U. S. army. Scott returns to India and continues his single ship raids on the Japs. He is now known back in the States as "the one man air force."

CHAPTER XIV: Col. Haynes is moved to China to head the bomber command under Gen. Chennault and Scott is left alone as commanding officer of the Ferry Command. Scott is ordered to report to Gen. Chennault in Kunming, China, as commanding officer of the 23rd Fighter Group.

CHAPTER XV: Col. Scott is ordered to proceed to the Kweilin area to take charge of fighter operations.

CHAPTER XVI: He intercepts a flight of Jap planes and downs a bomber. His tank is empty but he succeeds in landing it dry.

Major Tex Hill was the Squadron commander of the outfit that I had come to live with at Hengyang. He was a blue-eyed Texan, lean and lanky, six-feet-two of fighting blood. I imagine if he had lived in the frontier days of the American West, he would have been a gunman over there around the Pecos River—but a gunman on the side of the Law. I used to shut my eyes out there, sitting on the alert in Hunan, and think about him. I could picture that drawling Texan walking slowly through a border town with two pearl-handled 45's swinging low at his hips. Walking with his arms stiff at his sides, and watching with his cold, blue eyes some "villain" that was approaching the other way. I could almost hear the hot lead spitting from those guns as the two shot it out, and I could always see the villain fall, with Tex standing there looking at his smoking guns. Tex would always have won, for he was the greatest fighter that I ever saw, the most loyal officer, and the best friend.

I'd seen Tex shoot down Japs in the sky and I had followed on his wing to learn the toctics of the AVG. I know that if there is any man I owe my life to during the months I fought in China, it is Maj. Tex Hill. Seeing what he did in combat, and how he handled his ship; seeing his coolness on the alert, and his keen desire for action. I can hear Tex now, after he had studied the plotting board that the interpreters were covering with little red flags showing the positions of the approaching Jap fighter ships. I can hear him saying: "Well, gentlemen, I think we'll take off." And he would smile as he pulled on his helmet and goggles.

Tex was the son of the Chaplain of the Texas Rangers. Before the AVG days he had been a Navy pilot flying off carrier decks, and in the Flying Tigers he had been second only to Bob Neal as the leading ace. Tex was the most truthful man I ever met—even his subconscious thoughts were truthful. He used to tell me that one day after Madame Chiang Kai-shek had pinned a medal on him for shooting down some Japanese planes over Toungoo, she had asked him the next time he shot down one of those Japanese planes to please think of her and dedicate it to the people of China. Tex of course said, "Yes, Ma'am . . ."

I imagine that most any man among us would have said "Yes" to the Madame, and the next time we shot down a Jap we would have told the great lady all about it. We would have remembered after the fight what we had promised her, and we would have gone in with a romantic story of how we had met the barbaric Japanese and had seen the Madame's face in the skies as we shot the enemy down . . . and had thought of her and the people of China. But not Tex Hill—he was too honest for that. He told me, "Colonel, I promised her that, and I really meant it. And I've shot down about twelve Japs since that promise four months ago. But you know I never can remember to think about her when I'm in a battle—I'm too busy."

Well now, you hold that picture of Tex Hill for a minute while I show him to you in another light.

One day over Hengyang, after we had broken the Japanese wave with our assault and support and there were some fifteen Zeros burning around among the pagodas of this Hunan capital, I saw an odd sight down below. There was one lone Jap, doubtless of the suicide Samurai school, for though his buddies had either been shot down in their attempted strafing attack or had turned for home, this arrogant follower of the Shinto Shrine was strafing the field—alone. Two of us rolled to go get him, but from the end of the field towards the river I saw a P-40 pull out of a dive and head for the Jap. It was Tex Hill.

As the two fighters drew together in this breath-taking head-on attack, I saw their tracers meeting and for a second I didn't know whether the ships ran together or both exploded in the air. As the smoke thinned I saw the P-40 flash on through and out into the clear, but the Jap crashed and burned on the field of Hengyang. Hill and the Jap had shot it out nose to nose, and once again I thought of the days of Western gunplay.

We landed and waited for Tex to come over. As we stood around the burning enemy ship, I saw Hill striding across the field from his fighter. Hanging low on his right leg was his army forty-five. Subconsciously I looked at his other leg as if I expected to find the mate hanging there.

Tex's blond hair was blowing in the wind, his eyes were looking with venomous hate at the Jap, his jaw was set. I had opened my mouth to congratulate him, for he had shot down two enemy ships that day, when I had a closer look at his eyes . . . Tex strode over close to the fire and looked at the mutilated Jap where he had been thrown from the cockpit. Then, without a change of expression, he kicked the largest piece of Jap—the head and one shoulder—into the fire. I heard his slow drawl: "All right, you sonofabitch—if that's the way you want to fight it's all right with me."

Tex calmly left the group and walked back to his ship and into the alert shed for his cup of tea. None of us said anything. The Chinese coolies who usually yelled "Ding-hao—ding-hao" saw his eyes and the set of his jaw, too—and just waited until later to congratulate him.

Things kept right on happening at Hengyang, for after all there are Japanese bases fanning out in many directions—East, North, Northeast, South, and Southeast. Some of them were within an hour's flight of our field. Hankow was the one to the North on the Yangtse. The Japs sent their bombers to worry us from up there, and before we caught on how to do it, they made life miserable for us. They had gotten tired of sending their day bombers down, for they lost too many; so now they had resorted to a period of constant night attack.

C. Of C. Cancels Aug. 14 Meeting Account Of Victory

Account of the war's end Tuesday, the August meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce set for that evening, was called off and announcement will be made later on date and program for the next meeting, officers of the group stated this week.

Regarding Shore Patrol

The following letter from Commandant W. L. Friedell of the 11th Naval District, in answer to a petition that had been sent by the local Chamber of Commerce asking for the restoration of the Naval shore patrol in Ocean Beach, was reecived Tuesday by Secretary Forest Whedon of the Chamber of Commerce:

"Your letter of July 25, 1945, and the attached petition have been read with interest. The Commandant does not tolerate misconduct on the part of Naval personnel and every effort will be made to prevent disturbances to the peace and dignity of your community.

Due to the exigencies of war, the services of men trained in police duties are being required elsewhere. Therefore, the number of men so trained and immediately available to the Commandant for assignment to such duties has been considerably reduced.

Until additional permanent personnel can be obtained, the Commandant will gives immediate attention to providing temporary reilef for assisting the local police force to maintain order with particular emphasis on the type of offenses mentioned in your letter.

"The Commandant will investigate the matter and give what assistance the limited facilities will permit. The personnel of the District Shore Patrol has been radically cut by orders of the Navy Department and fewer men are consequently available."

Thanks Services For End Of War Held In Churches

Prayers of thanksgiving were said throughout the churches here beginning immediately after word of the victory in the war were received Tuesday. The bell of Sacred Heart church was pealed by the pastor Rev. E. F. Hannon at 4 o'clock Tuesday and services were held from 4 to 5 p. m. that afternoon. On Wednesday the "Feast of the Assumption," a holy day of obligation, four masses, were said by Rev. Hannon and Father Williams, O. F. A. and prayers of thanksgiving were said and special prayers for the families and the boys who will never return.

At Trinity Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. Phillip Harris, came down especially from Long Beach where he had been visiting his family, to hold a Thanksgiving service and Eucharist at 10 a. m. Wednesday. Father Harris spoke on the victory and as his parable chose the text of the "Publican and the Pharisee." Father Harris returned this week to Long Beach to continue his visit and during his absence Rev. C. F. Taylor of El Cajon will hold the services Sunday at 7:45 and 10 a. m.

Point Loma Methodist church held special Victory services Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock and again at 9 o'clock with Rev. James F. Roberts giving specially prepared sermons. Both services were exceptionally well attended. It was originally planned to only have one service but due to requests it was necessary to hold two. The congregation sang hymns of praise beginning with the National anthem and singing the doxology. Special prayers of thanksgiving and a special prayer for families whose husbands, fathers and sons gave their lives on the battlefield were said. Rev. Roberts spoke on the solemnity of the day as well as the joyfulness. He also told his congregation that we must realize the greatest fight for the civilians is yet ahead for a peace that is just and durable. He mentioned the fact that we have the opportunity of being a great nation by taking the lead in planning the strategy for a lasting peace. Another way to have a great nation is to strengthen the homes. Boys who return will want to have a home that is filled with love, understanding, mercy and justice.
